COP28 Global Day of Action for Climate Justice

In 2021 over 100,000 people took to the streets of Glasgow to tell world leaders at the COP26 climate talks they wanted action on the climate and nature emergencies.

Since then, despite record breaking temperatures and increasingly devastating climate impacts, we have seen a lack of robust and urgent action to reduce emissions, protect nature, or make the biggest polluters pay for the damage they are causing.

At a time when the UK Government is rolling back on climate and nature policies, and the Scottish Government has delayed its vital new climate plan (which sets out the steps to achieve legally set targets), it's more important than ever for us to come together to show people in Scotland want the urgent and fair climate action that they've been demanding for decades.

Join us at the Scottish Parliament in Edinburgh on 9 December to send a strong message to decision makers that we are united for action, to tackle the climate and nature crises, secure sustainable jobs, a fairer, greener, healthier society for everyone in Scotland and justice for those impacted by the climate crisis.

Temperatures and waters are rising

2023 will be the hottest year on record and, as the world boils, extreme weather events will wreak ever more destruction on communities across the globe.

Injustices are rising

The climate crisis is being driven by the actions of the biggest and richest polluters - including fossil fuel companies and the excessive emissions of the wealthiest. But at the same time, many people are struggling to pay their household bills and, around the world, those with the least are facing more poverty, more hunger, more suffering.

We are rising

As the rich and powerful continue to profit, we unite together to say that the people of Scotland want to see leadership that puts people before profit. We want bold action from our leaders to deliver climate justice in Scotland and globally, and make the biggest polluters pay for the damage they cause. We want warmer homes, better public transport, a real plan to transition away from fossil fuels.
